Dogwoods By The Dozens

Frank Coleman of Evergreen Avenue, Appomattox, brings dogwoods "out of the woods" and has successfully replanted more than two dozen of them in his own yard and the neighbors'. Secret to the replanting, he says, is to pull the young dogwood up by the roots. "Digging around them cuts the roots," he says. Once they're home, he waters them every day. These he carefully watered for two years. Now four-year old trees, they are a mass of blooms, a fitting tribute to spring and to the state flower of Virginia.
